About the FDP

Qualitative research is in-depth research using a range of techniques, which aim to understand why people think, feel, react and behave in the way they do. Qualitative research can pretty much be adapted to any research context that isn't about knowing "How many". Qualitative research is an open ended approach that can be adapted and changed while the research is ongoing, which enhances the quality of the data and the insights that are generated. This FDP has been organized to facilitate the in depth understanding of Qualitative research which is lacking in the current scenario.

About the resource persons

Dr. Srinivasan Kannan, is currently serving as Professor, Achutha Menon Centre for Health Science Studies, Free Chitra Tirunal Institute for Medical Sciences and Technology, Thiruvananthapuram. He has a very strong academic, professional and research records supported by numerous noteworthy publications. His research interests include Health planning and management, Health policy, Sexual and reproductive health. He is a Health Science Faculty Member with a handful of projects being carried out under his guidance.

Ms. Phaneeth Saki is currently serving as a Lecturer in the Social Work Department of the Royal University of Phnom Penh, Cambodia. She is offering training, counseling and psychotherapy for 18 years to children, adolescents and adults with behavioral and emotional difficulties and/or with trauma. Currently she teaches at the Social Work Department, Royal University of Phnom Penh. She is trained in Cognitive Behavior Therapy, Eye Movement Desensitization and Reprocessing (EMDR), Testimonial Therapy, and Positive Therapy, techniques that have been highly effective. She is also working as Training Coordinator, Therapist and Clinical Supervisor in Transcultural Psychosocial Organization (TPO-Cambodia).
